

“

It wasn't until a near death experience with a semi-truck in California, when I almost died, that I realized I wanted to pursue a career in healthcare. The staff gave me hope for a better life than what I had seen for myself and it was then that I began taking courses again.

I hope that by earning my Bachelor's in Healthcare Administration I can also instill that same feeling of hope in another person. To remind them that your goals can be accomplished no matter how long it takes you to reach them, and if the path to reach those goals has been left, it can always be found again.

Every person has a purpose and with the education that I can earn from this degree I can help others find their purpose just as I have found my own.”
